Arnold Zariskie is driving a new "Country Club" Hudson six which he took delivery of last week from the Hudson dealers.

Miss Lucille Pyne of Warner is keeping house and caring for the children of Mrs. Kimball Anderson while the latter is in Salt Lake with her mother and helping attend her father who is very seriously ill.

H. P. Welch of the G. W. G. Co., travelling out of Lethbridge was in Raymond on Wednesday. Pat's foot which laid him up for nearly five months is well again now and he is getting around as usual.

FARMERS DON'T GET ENOUGH

Sir Edward Beatty, president of the C. P. R., in an address delivered at Montreal this week, said:

"Our biggest single block of customers, the farmers of Western Canada, are not getting enough for their goods to enable them to buy what other people have to sell, and my company cannot hope to prosper unless this exchange of traffic goes on. If we are to have profit then the farmer must sell his wheat and buy other goods as well. It is difficult for him to do that in any volume at the present level of income which he enjoys.

"That leads me to think that, unless the price of what the farmer produces is going to rise very rapidly, the rest of us will have to set our minds very seriously to reducing the price of what he buys."

ARE WE FOR ALBERTA?

A foolish question. And yet, perhaps not so foolish. We are proud to show our heads off at our loyalty to King and country, and yet do very little if anything at all to prove it. Perhaps our loyalty for Alberta is of the same type.

During the past week we have had a Treasury branch opened in Raymond. If we are correctly informed, the purpose of these treasury branches is to encourage and foster Alberta industry, and if possible to create new industries. In the realization of this aim, if it is realized, many people will be taken off relief, the turn over of wholesale and retail business will increase, and greater prosperity will be the lot of all people of Alberta. Surely we would all appreciate this coming to pass.

If we would, then what is our attitude toward the Treasury branch? Are we willing to at least passively assist by joining and at least doing what we can to circulate the vouchers and boost the purchase of Alberta made goods? We say that the Treasury branch idea should be divorced entirely from politics and considered as a strictly business proposition not as political propaganda. So far as we can see we are not obligating ourselves to support Social Credit in our support of the Treasury branch scheme. In fact if we read correctly, the term Social Credit is not mentioned in the contract between merchant and Government at all. In fact, so far as we have been able to see, the Provincial government could change tomorrow without upsetting the established procedure of these Treasury branches in the least. True, there are seemingly unfair dealings in the set up with respect to certain items of the plan. The men boosting it and asking for your support realize these, and to date have found no way around them. Probably we should condemn the entire set up and withhold our support because of these, and maybe we should say so despite these things and see if as the thing proceeds, it will not all turn out right. We wish we could tell the outside.

Why should we support the idea? Two weeks ago we condemned it and were sure it was all hooey. Because we had to, we have studied it some. We are far from understanding it all yet, but we believe we do understand enough of it to see in it the possibility of a great deal of benefit to Alberta resources, manufacturing and industry, and, if it is good for these, then as citizens of Alberta it must be good for us. If we can produce ink, shingles, cosmetics, earthenware, furniture and what not from the resources of Alberta, and in doing it put idle men and women back to work, earn bonuses on our purchases and increase prosperity, then we should support it.

It seems that the Jews were the only ones who were so wise that "no good thing could come out of Nazareth."

A "LUNG" IN TIME

(Editorial from the Rotarian Magazine)

Lord Nuffield, the millionaire British motorcar manufacturer, is reported to have set aside a portion of his huge factory at Cowley for the manufacture of "iron lungs." Profit is no part of his aim. In fact, his announced purpose is to present the machines to hospitals without cost. He hopes to make it possible for every hospital in the British Empire to have at least one of these strange but important life saving devices. Only a small percentage of hospitals now have them.

The first use of the iron lung on a human being was made in Boston in 1929. It saved the life of a young college man who was the victim of infantile paralysis. The exact number of lives saved since then by its use is not known, but it must be well above 1,000. The number of lives lost during those ten years because there was no iron lung available where it was needed is estimated to be many times 1,000.

An iron lung is a fairly costly piece of equipment. Prices vary, but it is said that the average price of the 5,000 which are to be made by Lord Nuffield under mass-production conditions will probably be about $500. Many hospitals with limited budgets cannot afford to pay the price.

Not many individuals could afford the price either. But there's a way around that objection. In many cities civic organizations and service clubs have either bought an iron lung outright and presented it to the local hospital, or have started a community movement for such a purchase.

Now the iron lung at your hospital—if it has one—probably stands idle most of the time. Surely it is just waiting.

When fire escapes first came into use, an old school-board member said to the principal who demanded one for his building, "We don't need one. We ain't had a fire in the school-house for 25 years." One could dispute the need for an iron lung in about the same way, but no one would—when the need for one visited his neighbor's family—or his own.

THE WEEK IN EDMONTON

(From the Alberta Publicity Bureau)

Edmonton, April—Departure of the M.L.A.'s from the Legislative Buildings following prorogation has left a quiet atmosphere that contrasts greatly with the noise and bustle of sessional days. Yet beneath the apparent calm there is activity—the silent and efficient activity of the administrative services as they swing once more into the business of a new working year.

With the passage of the new lands act, the era of homesteading appears to have ended in Alberta. No more will land-hungry settlers stake their classic bet of ten dollars to a quarter section that they can "make a go of it" on virgin land. The new act, which provides for a long term leasing proposition with an option of purchase, may rightfully be set down as Alberta's charter of coming-of-age. It would seem that a new phase of our country's building was reached at the end of March.

There were no frantic last minute rushes to take up homesteads. Paradoxically, the land office did no "land office business." Actually, during the last days of the homestead era, only 68 persons filed on new quarters up to March 25. A number of options granted before that date may be taken up with in a period of 90 days. Of the 68 homestead filings, 46 were by women.

Edmonton Spring Show, which has attracted good attendances at the Arena this week, brought forth the usual fine exhibits of livestock and horseflesh which Alberta breeders produce. Among the awards taken by the Provincial Department of Agriculture were the championship in Shorthorn bull section championship and reserve championship in Ayrshires.

Indicative of the desire for building improvement among home owners in Alberta is the announcement by Hon. Charles Dunning, federal minister of finance, that Alberta stands second in the amount of lendings approved under the H.P. Loans approved from November 1, 1936 when the scheme became effective, to March 31 of this year numbered 64,746, valued at

With the approach of spring work on Alberta farms, the need for vaccination of all horses against the expected onslaught of sleeping sickness is being stressed by Department of Agriculture officials. Early this week 80,000 doses of chick vaccine had been distributed, ample further supplies are assured.

With a horse population of approximately 650,000 head in Alberta, it is apparent that protection of this great store of real wealth will demand all the care that owners can give if a serious epidemic is to be avoided.

Alberta's enlarged school unit system will prove the greatest contribution ever made to education in this province. Premier Aberhart told 600 teachers in Edmonton this week. He spoke at a convention banquet held in connection with the 22nd annual meet of the A.T.A. Mr. Aberhart said that his predecessor in office, Mr. Perrin Baker, deserved full credit for the pioneering work done to introduce the larger unit.

Earlier in the evening, the W. Barnett on behalf of the A. T. A. presented with T.A. The secretary treasurer of the organization said teachers were grateful for having been placed on a professional basis in recent years.

The illuminated address presented by the A. T. A. to the Premier read "We of the Alberta Teachers' Association have various party loyalties but in this we are one—you have counted political advantage well lost that the public welfare might be served." In reply, Mr. Aberhart said that what had been done was in the interests of Alberta's children first. "Children are the great thing. They must have what they want. Until this is realized, we will not have pure democracy," he added.

Progress of Alberta wheat marketings is discussed in a report issued by the Department of Agriculture this week. It is disclosed that primary receipts at country points in the province for the 1938-39 crop year beginning August 1st and extending to March 17 reach approximately 75.5 of the 1934 production.

The fixed price of 80 cents prevailing at that period is said to be responsible for the comparatively small holdings, and the deliveries of grain in the fall of 1938 are described as remarkable. For the three prairie provinces these deliveries reached 265,000,000 bushels to March 17, compared with 109,871,576 bushels for the same period in the previous year.

Completion of the winter road to Great Slave Lake after six weeks' work is announced here. A federal provincial project that cost $52,000, a trail is now cut through the entire bush country from Grimshaw and Hay River Post. Clearing started in February following intensive preparations by the Provincial Department of Public Works, and four crews were kept busy opening up the new route. 300 miles of clearing was done.

WEEKLY LETTER

A FEW SUGGESTIONS REGARDING THE FEEDING, CARE AND MANAGEMENT OF BABY CHICKS AND GROWING STOCK

The responsibility of keeping chicks growing and developing once they are out of the shell rests largely with the person entrusted with their care. The chicks are relatively helpless creatures and under modern and what might be termed artificial methods of production must depend almost if not entirely on the feed and care which they receive for sustenance and growth.

In caring for baby chicks three things, namely, sanitary quarters, warmth, and a balanced feed including the necessary ingredients should always be provided.

It may be well to stress the importance of cleanliness as a factor in ensuring strong and healthy chicks. The brooding equipment, houses and the feed and water containers should all be kept thoroughly clean. This is not a difficult job and most of us realize that it should be done, but for some reason just fail to do it and then wonder why so many birds die.

The brooder die in particular should be thoroughly cleaned and this may be done by scrubbing the floor, windows and the lower part of the walls, using a lye solution made by putting one can of lye into three to four gallons of cold water. This lye solution should be applied with a broom and at all times great care should be exercised to see that it does not come in contact with the operator's skin. When dry, the whole inside of the brooder house should be sprayed with whitewash to which a good disinfectant has already been added.

Three days at least before the chicks are expected, the brooder stove is started so that the floor and walls of the building will be thoroughly dry and an opportunity is afforded to have the stove properly adjusted. At the same time, the outside of the building may be banked with straw or manure if it is deemed necessary. Dry straw should be put in the house the day the chicks are put in. The temperature of the brooder house, taken at the edge of the hover, 2 to 2½ inches above the floor should approximate 95 degrees when the chicks first go in and is gradually reduced until the chicks are feathered and climatic conditions are such that heat in the brooder house is no longer required.

Feeding baby chicks should start as soon as they are removed from the incubator or as soon as they are received from the hatchery and once they are started, they should always have feed and water available so that they may eat when they feel like it. This method of feeding, rather than feeding at definite intervals, saves time and labor and perhaps leads to greater uniformity and growth in the chicks as there is no crowding and fighting for feed.

Certain fundamental principles must always be kept in mind regarding the feeding of chicks and growing stock. Growing animals of all kinds require relatively large amounts of protein, energy producing feeds and minerals. Therefore, all three of these ingredients must be present in the ration in approximately the proportion required by the birds. In any event, they should be in sufficient amounts to supply all requirements and it is desirable to have a slight excess rather than a deficiency of the important ingredients.

We will continue this discussion in next week's letter and will have something further to say regarding certain generally accepted and fundamental practices pertaining to the successful "growing out" of young stock.

CANADIAN GARDEN

SERVICE

Nature abhors something Screens

more than vacuums, she also detests straight lines. In gardening the amateur is well advised to follow this natural example.

Straight narrow fences, abrupt and cramping corners around garage or house, narrow straight sidewalks, all multiply emphasize the confining limits of small lots. These, however, can be made to appear many times more spacious, if the fences and walls are partially covered with vines, if corners are screened with shrubbery, leading down to tall annual flowers.

A curve in the walk or driveway will make it actually intriguing and will not add more than a few seconds to navigating time between front door and the roadway. If we put in these curves, however, we must be sure to make a reason for them otherwise the whole effect will be artificial. At the head in the driveway or path, therefore it is well to have a tree or a group of shrubs or a flower bed.

In screening, it is not necessary, nor desirable to cover the whole of fence wall or garage unless the same is absolutely unsightly. Much more pleasing results follow where the shrubbery vines and flowers merely break the lines of the manmade structure behind them, but leave enough showing for contrast.

Soil Hints

After a long winter cooped up in doors or confined to side walks one is inclined to rush into the garden too soon and too eagerly. Experienced gardeners, however, advise caution. It does the soil no good to be dug while still too wet. It is liable to become lumpy, later, perhaps, to bake hard. With heavy clay soil early working is particularly dangerous.

A good test is to look at one's shoes. If these become muddy after a tramp through the garden it is best to go to the fire side and read a seed catalogue or a book. Another test is to take a handful of the soil and squeeze firmly. If it compacts into a ball it is too wet to be worked with safety, if it merely crumbles, digging may commence.

Texture of both heavy and light soil will be greatly improved by the digging in of well rotted manure, decaying leaves or other garden refuse. This sort of thing adds humus and moisture absorbing powers to light soil, makes the heavy kind more amendable to spade and fork.

No Hurry

The beginner is warned against too deep, too early, and too close planting of vegetables and flower seeds. Nasturtiums, peas, beans, corn and such large seeds should go in about an inch or so and be planted at least three or four inches apart. Tiny seed like alyssum, poppy and onion is merely pressed into the soil. Before sowing, mix with a little sand to help spread the sowing more even.

Good Speed

It is impossible to over-emphasize the importance of good seed. Other factors may be beyond control but the gardener has absolute check over this foundation. Whether, soil and location may be ideal but without good seed, specially selected to suit Canadian conditions, the

First Vegetables

First vegetables to be planted in the garden are going to be a failure. In the spring are spinach, all sorts of lettuce, radishes and peas. Once upon a time gardeners advised against the early sowing of peas for fear seed might rot in wet cold ground. There is scant danger of this, however, and biggest crops invariably come from early planting. Garden peas like sweet peas make their growth in cool weather.

Second planted vegetables will be carrots, beans, cabbage potatoes and similar things. These will resist a fair amount of cold. Tender vegetables include corn, melons, cucumbers and tomatoes. Nothing is to be gained by planting these before danger of frost is over.

With most vegetables, it is advisable to make at least three sowings a week or two apart in order to spread the harvest that much longer over the season. With peas this spreading out is secured by sowing three kinds, an early, a medium and a late variety which will result in a continuous supply of green peas for the table from mid-June until late July.

Proper thinning, frequent cultivation and an occasional application of some good commercial fertilizer will keep vegetables growing quickly and quick growing make for tenderness.

BOUNCE TO SAFETY

A high-test laminated safety glass is the newest development in the motor industry. It has been announced in Philadelphia, where the Franklin Institute has bestowed its accolade on the latest gift of the laboratory to public safety. This "rubber glass" will stretch and may break but cannot shatter. A demonstration test is said to have shown that it can stop a half-pound steel ball travelling at a velocity of 56 feet a second yet it is flexible enough to be "rolled up like a rug."

Congratulatory messages by President Roosevelt and Stewart McDonald, federal highway administrator, commending the scientists who brought about this revolutionary development declare that this new process is a milestone in the annals of American industry.

It is an entrancing idea. Perhaps the next step in this direction will be the manufacture of rubber automobiles, merrily bouncing off one another on the highway, having lots of fun and hurting nobody.

Man is still superior in one particular. After the age of 12 he can smoke without seeming to be showing off.

After years of quiet research we have about concluded that no decent omelet was ever made by a cook who was doing something else.

CROSSINGS AND CAR ACCIDENTS

There would be fewer crossing accidents if it were made a regulation that every car, truck, bus, or other type of motor vehicle, come to a full stop at a safe distance before proceeding over a level crossing. A suggestion to this effect was made in the legislative debate a few days prior to prorogation, by one of the members.

It is encouraging to note that the Federal Government has made a grant of one million dollars for the elimination of grade crossings as the Dominion. This amount, of course, is only a drop in the bucket, to what would be required for complete elimination throughout Canada. Level crossings must eventually go—accidents are reported daily, and the percentage of these are due to carelessness, or recklessness. Repeated warnings have been given through the press in story and pictures, and also from the public platform, and by means of "danger" signs. Last year there were five deaths in Alberta alone at railway crossings, which shows that little heed is taken of warnings. The only sure method to prevent such accidents is to remove the crossings by construction of sub-ways or overpasses for motor traffic or by re-routing some of the highways where possible.—Drumheller Mail.

With the opening of the baseball season, it is natural to see laudatory comments regarding the sport of sports. Annual eulogies about the part which the diamond game plays in the development of American manhood, the inculcation of ethical qualities and the dissemination of basic principles of citizenship are heralds which the public has come to anticipate.

As for ourselves, we prefer to turn away from all such idealistic twaddle and simply observe that baseball is a grand old game. Entirely apart from their possible civic and moral significance, the crack of the bat, the mad slide into second and the sensational one-handed spear are essential features of the American scene which add to the joy of millions.

No other justification is needed. It is enough to say that baseball occupies a big place in the heart of America, that it contains all the elements of a magnificent pastime and that it is full of thrills. With this observation, we leave all high-brow analysis to the seasonal scholars and merely add in passing that there's a potent kick in the current cry, "Play ball!"

TRY EVERYTHING ONCE

Tolerance of things, like tolerance of people, is gained only by trying them out. If you are accustomed to travel in Pullmans, try today coach or a bus. The experience will open up new channels of interest. If you travel habitually in day coaches, save a few pennies and treat yourself to a Pullman—it works the same way Mrs. Roosevelt recently advised a group of conventional girls, "Go out as discoverers in your own country. Be real voyagers even in a circumscribed area." Good advice—try everything from headcheese to flying in a snowstorm (if the airplane company will let you), and you'll soon realize you've been missing far more than you guessed.—William Moulton Marston in the Rotarian Magazine.

WAS SPECIAL KIND

Two Scotswomen happened to meet in the street. One was carrying a parcel, and was asked by the other what it was.

"Oh, it's some ham," was the reply. "I always buy ham at Sandy's store."

The other thought she would try some ham, and off she went to Sandy's store.

"I want some ham," she said. "What kind?" asked the shop keeper.

"Oh, the same as Mrs. MacDonald gets."

The shopkeeper smiled, and leaning confidently over the counter, asked:

"Whaur's yer bottle?"

FREE COURSE OFFERED

Through the co-operation of the Federal and the Provincial Governments there is made available public money to enable young women from 16 to 35 years of age to secure a period of training for Home Service that would enable them to secure employment under favorable conditions. A training school for this purpose has been set up in Calgary in a most attractive home under the direction of three competent instructors, and young women whose homes are in cities, towns or hamlets are invited to apply for admission. The course runs for a period of three months, ten being enrolled each month, and there is no tuition fee. For young women in good health and endorsed by reputable citizens, arrangements can be made to provide transportation, and for Board and Room accommodation under supervision without cost to the party for the three months period. There are several other advantages, but one of the main is the undertaking to help the young woman to secure a job at a fair wage and to supervise her in her work. Those to whom this privilege is offered must give an undertaking to work on some job for wages for a period of at least six months immediately after graduation, if suitable place may be found for her. This is an excellent opportunity for desirable young women anxious to improve themselves and inquiries are invited by the committee in charge, in care of the Government Employment Bureau, Calgary.
